KEEPING DUCKS

If you are starting with duck keeping, or just interested in ducks, this video is well worth watching.

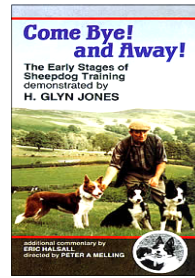

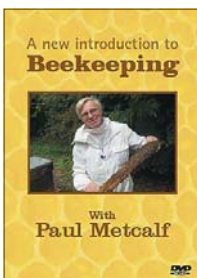

Tom follows the journey of ducklings from incubation through their lives as he explains methods of feeding, housing, breeding and generally caring for ducks on the farm and at show. We meet Ross Kent, a beginner whose ambition is to breed quality birds, and with Tom's guidance Ross prepares for the British Waterfowl Championship. This is the perfect way to get a thorough grounding in duck keeping, choosing a breed that appeals to you and enjoying some typical duck behaviour at Folly Farm, Gloucestershire in the company of the former President of the British Waterfowl Association

A NEW INTRODUCTION TO BEE-KEEPING

This revised edition of Paul Metcalf's best-selling guide to beekeeping takes us through the beekeeping year from April to the onset of winter. The management of the hive is carefully explained and demonstrated, including swarm control, honey extraction and feeding. In this edition there are new sections on choice of hive and equipment, as well as the latest advice on disease control.

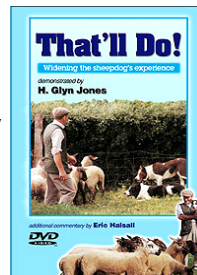

Paul Metcalf has been keeping bees for over sixty years. For much of that time he was Beekeeping Advisor for Norfolk and lecturer on beekeeping at Easton College. His DVD is paced to allow the viewer time to study in detail correct handling procedures at all stages of the hive's summer cycle.

COME BYE! And AWAY! The Early Stages of Sheepdog Training

Focusing on that crucial moment when a young dog is first let loose with sheep, Glyn Jones shows how he teaches the four key commands and gains the dog's willing co-operation. This is the core requirement in the training of a sheepdog to any level and the element that newcomers find so hard to master. He is joined on the programme by the late Eric Halsall, one of Britain's leading writers about sheepdogs and trialling.

THAT'LL DO—Widening The Sheepdog's Experience

Following from Glyn Jones' video introducing sheepdog training, Come Bye! and Away!, this programme is for owners whose dogs know the four basic commands and can perform straightforward tasks such as the drive. In this sequel Glyn Jones demonstrates how to teach more specific commands and then reduce command contact. Jimmy, seen as a pup in the first video, is now put through his paces and learns to control sheep in a detailed way over a wide area. Glyn is joined on the programme by the late Eric Halsall, one of Britain's leading writers about sheepdogs and trialling.

TAKE TIME Taking Your Dog From Farm Work to Trialling

To prove that a working sheepdog can become a competent trials competitor, Glyn Jones takes two very different dogs and their handlers through their paces in the scenic Welsh countryside.

Donna Jones is a shepherdess whose dog Zac is one of several working with a large flock of sheep. By contrast market researcher Marion Turner's dog Lynne is kept on a smallholding in the south of England.

The skills of the handlers are assessed by Glyn who encourages more positive commands and corrects common faults. He is joined on the programme by the late Eric Halsall, one of Britain's leading writers about sheepdogs and trialling.

FIRST STEPS IN BORDER COLLIE SHEEPDOG TRAINING from Chaos to Control

One of the beginners main obstacles to training a sheepdog is that he or she has to control the sheep while at the same time encouraging the dog to go around them. The time-honoured way to do this is to use an experienced sheepdog to keep the sheep in the centre of the paddock. Andy Nickless bases his training on containing the sheep without the need for the second dog. The first DVD shows how his system works & gives detailed advice on: the choice of dog; choice of sheep; management of a field; what you as a handler must know; when to start training; and how to proceed.

The second DVD shows the basic training of three young dogs with very different temperaments.

HONEY - A BEEKEEPERS GUIDE

A unique DVD for beekeepers, devoted entirely to honey.

Starting with removal of the honey supers from the hive, the DVD describes how to extract honey correctly. It shows different honeys from different nectar sources, the production of creamed and clear honey and how to prepare and present honey for show and sale. There is also a demonstration of making mead.
