FORD & FORDSON DVDS

FORDSON FARMING

The era of Fordson Farming was probably the greatest epoch in the history of Ford tractors. It began in 1945 with the launch of the stalwart E27N Major and continued through the E1A series, which included the acclaimed Fordson Diesel Major. In 1957, the Major got a workmate as the Dexta added a new facet to Fordson Farming before the 'New Performance' models of the mid-1960s brought the era to a close.

The script has been written by Stuart Gibbard, author of the award-winning Ford Tractor Story books, who has selected some of the best examples of the Fordson tractors of the period for the programme. Over thirty machines, from Dagenham production models to rare four-wheel drive and tracked conversions made by manufacturers such as County, Doe and Roadless, are seen in action with authentic implements at various locations

COUNTY TRACTORS WORKING DAYS With Ford Conversions

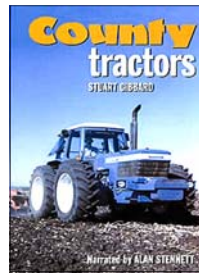

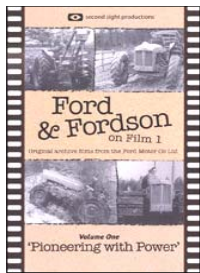

Over a cloudless September weekend a remarkable collection of tractors from County and other specialist manufacturers enjoyed perfect working conditions at Tedburn St Mary, near Exeter, Devon. The models shown in this programme range from early conversions based on the Fordson Major through to the massive Muir-Hill 171 and County 1884. Well-known machines of the 1960s and 70s, including the County 1124, Roadless 120 and Northrop 5004, are seen at work.

ROADLESS TRACTORS

Few small tractor manufacturers have fired the imagination with so many spectacular developments as Roadless Traction Ltd. Using rare archive footage, this video tells the story of the company's products from the tracked machines of the 1920s through to the forestry tractors of the 1980s.

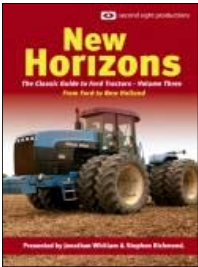

Stuart Gibbard has chosen films which focus particularly on the famous Roadless four-wheel drive tractors produced during the 1960s and 70s, as well as those which uncover some lesser known developments. The video also contains conversations with some of the personalities involved, to give a real insight into the work of this pioneering British company.

The video is fully scripted by Stuart Gibbard and narrated by Alan Stennett.

THE LEGENDARY DOE The Story of the Triple D, DOE 130 and the DOE 150

In the 1950s one of the most popular tractors on British farms was the Fordson Major. Whilst mostly capable, in some areas the Major lacked the power needed to deal with the heavy soil, and for one Essex farmer, the answer was to join two Major tractors together to form one articulated, four wheel drive, 100hp tractor. Resulting in the farm machinery icon we know today as the Doe Triple D.

This programme tells the story of the Doe Dual Drive, which on account of its tongue twisting nature was soon referred to as the Doe Triple D. We trace its origins back to its original conception by farmer George Pryor through to the production of the tandem tractor built by agricultural dealers Ernest Doe & Sons at their Essex base in Ulting, Specially filmed material is supplemented by remarkable and previously unseen archive colour footage shot by Alan Doe in the early 1960s.

With the help of former Doe employees, we unravel the story of the production of this incredible machine and how it developed over the years alongside the evolving Fordson Major skid unit. We talk to the chairman of the Doe Owners Club and show many fine examples of both the tractors and their implements at work. Special features include the history of Ernest Doe & Sons, and another showing Alan Doe's entire archive footage, compliment this fine programme.
