LOGGING & FORRESTRY DVDS

LOOKING AT LOGGING

Logging transport has a special place in the world of trucking. Vehicles are large, powerful and have to withstand heavy work day in, day out. Operating in demanding terrain on steep and treacherous mountain roads, log drivers are a special breed who develop a close bond with the vehicles in which they spend their lives. Their skills are matched only by those of the timber handlers working with their outsize machinery.

Looking at Logging Part 1 is the first of a two-part programme in which Pete Connock and Martin Phippard offer a unique insight into logging operations around the world.

Viewers are first introduced to the history of timber extraction around the globe. This is followed by a trip to Finland where a 60-tonne Sisu demonstrator powered by a CAT diesel hauls timber along snow-covered forest tracks.

On Vancouver Island in Canada off-highway Kenworth 850s operated by Western Forest Products are later seen hard at work among the spectacular mountains of Gold River.

In the southern hemisphere Kenworth B-double combinations cope with the rugged terrain of Tasmania. In New Zealand's north island the unforgettable spectacle of Rod Dahm's double-trailer outfits and the unique Pacific 'Twin Power' have been caught on film. Finally, we take a look at the Dai Wood operation in Wales using the first Volvo FMX tractor unit sold in the UK.

LOGGERS - From Chainsaw To Sawmill in British Colombia

The steep, boulder-strewn terrain of Vancouver Island makes special demands on the logging operation run by Hayes Forest Services. The fallers use chainsaws on timber that can have a trunk diameter of 7ft or more in work that is dangerous but exhilarating. For yarding, the company uses equipment that ranges from 19th-century technology derived from shipping to the most modern machines. The timber is extracted by truck, train and helicopter.

During a six-week stay in British Columbia, Dylan Winter filmed all these facets of the enterprise as well as a dry land sort and the Somas mill. He looked, too, at some of the support operations including road maintenance, bridge-building and blasting.

Good detail of the machinery, trains, helicopters, & the massive Hayes trucks used in this operation.

AFTER THE STORM - Part 1

A wide range of timber processors, loglifts, trucks, forwarders and quayside cranes is seen working in Sweden to clear forest devastation following a storm in January 2005. Storm Gudrun felled 250 million trees overnight following which contractors and machines were brought in from all over Europe to clear up.

Machinery enthusiast Lars von Rosen organised the professional filming of some of the more interesting equipment at work. He starts his programme with some of the earlier machines still at work: a 1973 Pika timber processor, a 1971 SMV hauler and a Weserhutte HW 70 tracked excavator from 1970. The rest of the programme deals with modern machines, starting with two Mantsinen dock cranes loading timber at the port of Halmstad. Back in the forest a Timberpro processor, a MAN timber trailer and two CAT 574s combine to show the capability of modern bulk-handling equipment. Part One finishes with a Liebherr 932 loading railway trucks.

AFTER THE STORM - Part 2

In the second of his two-part programme Lars von Rosen shows more machines at work in southern Sweden in 2005. Among the processors shown are an Atlas Königstiger and a Timbco Logmax 5000. Exciting footage shows Timberjack skidders operated by Bosnian contractors. Transporters include models from Sisu, Saurer and MAN. Perhaps the most striking scenes are those showing cranes and Svetrucks at huge timber stores, a paper mill and the Baltic port of Sölvesborgs

THE AXMEN Season Three

It would be very hard to beat this Ax Men series for excitement. In the Pacific north-west – Oregon and Washington State – three teams of loggers are battling to be called king of the mountain. The mountainous terrain is extreme, and you can add to that 90-degree summer heat and killer bees

DVD - 4 disc set approx 10 hrs running time #0175 NZ$59.95

AX MEN Season Two

In Season Two we follow several teams of loggers as they compete to see which can pull out most loads. They include one that uses helicopters and another that specializes in the salvage of water-soaked and sunken logs. There are many chances for conflict when rookies are trained and they commit the basic errors. There's a wide range of equipment on view from chainsaws upwards and many insights as to how the machinery is used – or shouldn't be used. Bad handling of the tools and machinery breakdowns add to the tensions.
